and as an Advertising Medium is worth more than all the other papers published in

One of the great charms of Parisian architecture is the conformation of the style and height of buildings to each other and to the width of the streets upon which they are situated. This is of course the result of municipal law, which is rigidly enforced in all cases Nothing is left to the judgment or taste of subordinate officials. The ordinance requires that the height of chimneys and the height and pitch of roofs shall be within certain prescribed limits, according to the width of the street and the height of the building itself, and it does not permit a man to put up a structure after his own fancy alone, and without regard to the character and purpose of other buildings in the neighborhood. Neither may he build it of any material or in any style he may choose. regardless of its effect upon the market value of adjoining property. French law recognizes the principle that the rights of the community are affected by every act of the citizen, and these rights are jealously guarded at every point. Thus the detailed plans and elevations of every building proposed to be erected in Paris must be submitted to the proper designated authorities, who are both competent for their duties and vested with needed powers, and they see to it that it shall be in height, arrangement and general appearance suitable to its surroundings and the purpose for which it is intended,-not too high and ornate, nor yet too low and insignificant in treatment. Of course, durability and safety against fire are the primary objects in view, but symmetry and proper architectural effects are looked after quite as carefully. The result every visitor to Paris sees, without perhaps understanding just how it is secured.

As a matter of some interest to readers of THE STAR the substance of some of the legal requirements above referred to are given. Reducing the French metre of measurement to our feet and inches, a building in the French capital may not exceed 38.37 feet in height on a street less than 25.58 feet wide; not over 47.88 feet on a street between 25.58 and 31.98 feet wide; not over 57.56 on a street 31.98 feet wide and over. On streets 65,60 feet wide and over the height may be carried to 65.50 feet, but in no case shall a private building contain more than six stories, including the entresol. The minimum height of a story shall be 8,52 feet, and the projection of a cornice shall not exceed the thickness of the wall at its summit.

From the American point of view, which practically accords to every body the right to do pretty much as he or she pleases, without regard to the effect upon others, some of these regulations seem to be arbitrary and unnecessary, or at least not suited to the conditions of life existing in this country. It will not be precable to Washington, with her broad avenues and her numerous parks, squares, circles, triangles, and other open spaces. But surely the ends they have in view are worthy the early and serious consideration of the control of the cont tended that, as a whole, they would be appliand enforced by an authority which has One lot of Jap. Tea Pots, were 75c. Red Ticketed both the technical knowledge and taste and the official power to secure the very best results in the directions above indicated. One step forward ought to be taken at once. Speculators and others desirous of immediate and enormous incomes from slight investments should be prevented from putting up low and unsightly shanties alongside of or between well-built blocks on wide and desirable streets and avenues. Not only are those who have made large investments in handsome buildings. calculated to improve and benefit the city, entitled to this protection against assaults upon the value of their property, but the welfare and prosperity of the whole community would be vastly promoted thereby. In this as in other matters affecting the public good, the "tastes" and desires of the individual should be held secondary to the rights and interests of the

Many of the suburbs of Washington are historie. Visitors are often shut up to a single mode of reaching these and other points of interest which surround the national capital. In the nature of progress this state of things cannot continue. The people demand and will have thoroughfares to and from all places of pleasure and resort near their country's political center. One of these places, the one of which the associations are more sacred than those of all others, is where the first President lived, died and was buried. The means of access to Mt. Vernon are notably inadequate. But this exclusion of the great mass of the public is not to last long, for the Virginia legislature has just chartered a railway to run from the city of Washington, or, rather, the Virginia shore opposite to it, to the home of Washington, and there is reason for expecting the early opening of the new route.

The grip has been traced by the London Times with reasonable certainty to eastern Asia and the floods, followed by famine and melaria, which occurred in the Hoang-Ho or Yellow river of China two years ago. Similar outbreaks of influenza have originated in the same region from the same cause, or at least | Storm Ulsters and Cape Coats-and at least a score of the disease has spread west through Siberia kinds to select from at $15 each. Kerseys, Meltons, just after overflows of Chinese rivers which produced famine and fevers. The great streams of the Celestial empire support a teeming population, and when the mud deposits destroy the rice crops and breed malaria the people die by hundreds of thousands and epidemic makes its career of conquest westward just as the ancient Scythians did. Until China and other Oriental countries receive our science and put in practice modern notions of sanitation there people's confidence and their common sense, and we is no preventive means that can stay the progress of the red, black and other deaths that issue from that cradle of destruction. All that can be done is to lessen the evil by proper treatment and quarantine closely against the deadlier pestilences.

The Chicago News speaks of "Washington's world fair project." The News errs in its use of words. It is thinking of its own city's relation to the fair. As it would have it, it would be "Chicago's world's fair project," but in Washington it would be the nation's world's fair project, and that is what the fair was intended to be and what it should be.

One point in defense of Secretary Windom's silver bill is not commonly borne in mind by the monometalists in their assaults upon the measure. The choice is between this bill, with its total repeal of the provision for silver coinage to the extent of two millions monthly in existing law, and the contention of the silver men for at least four millions per month, if they cannot scure free coinage. If these vigorous assailants of the Windom bill wish to increase the compulsory cominge of silver they seem to be adopting the most effective means STOCK TAKING DAY to bring it about,

No serious objection can be raised in any quarter against the "1,000-foot rule" to be enforced in the location of county saloous. No resident of the neighborhood will have more than five hundred feet to walk for his toddy and the casual passer can certainly restrain his impetuosity within the thousand feet range. The effect of the rule will be to make a start in the work of weeding out the saloons which by their number and in some cases by their character disfigure the main thoroughfare from the capital into Maryland and reduce the value of suburban property and the pleasure of suburbun life

This is "ripe" Flannel weather-sure enough. But it's hardly likely you want to make anything now out of the winter styles. The proper thing to do is to use the early spring nevelties—not a bit too soon—and the fresh patterns and bright designs and combination will produce pleasing "effects." The "New Ceylon Flannels" come to us more tasty than ever in the blending of colors—combinations of Blue and White or Pink, &c. Scotch made, and we control our styles. 50c. a yard is cheap for the quality of these—particularly being imported.

The French make a very good Wash Flannel, and they certainly have a knack of blending shades to give a most pleasing tone to them. Pajamas or Biouves, and to such uses they ought to be put—that is the idea they are made on. 65c. a yard and the best quality. THURSDAY, JAN UARY 23, 1890.

Tomorrow, Friday, January 24. will be "Remnant Day." At no season of the year is an immediate re sponse to our announcements more necessary, in order to secure an ad vertised article, than during the month of January—and especially on Remnant Days and the few days preceeding stock-taking.

January is the month in which we determine to close out our winter stock. The end of January we take account of stock (write down every article in the store) and the week or | so previous to that time we sell off all "Short Lengths," "Odd Sizes," "Broken Lines," "Small Lots," &c., regardless of their former price. A | week tomorrow night we take stock, and now is the judicious shoppers' | "harvest time." Extraordinary pargains are being offered throughout | the store.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP.

OFFICE OF

WOODWARD & LOTHROP,

"SHORT LENGTHS" IN DRESS GOODS - REMNANT PRICES RE-DUCED,—Nearly every single "short length" of Dress Goods has been re-duced the second time. Without exception this is the best chance to buy a small piece of Wool Goods ever offered. They are none the less desirable than they ever were-on the contrary, reducing the reduced prices only make them all the more desirable and better bargains. Examine them tomorrow and compare the former with the present price. Some you desire for a Child's Dress or Tes Gown or Wrapper for yourself. Two pieces-a Plaid or Stripe, with a piece of Plain to combine, will make you a nice Spring Dress, and enable you to save about haif you expected to pay. (First floor, second annex.) WOODWARD & LOTHROP

"SHORT LENGTHS" IN BLACK GOODS

We shall offer at exactly half their original price about a dozen "short lengths" of 50-inch Blackand-gray and Black-and-white Serge in plaids and stripes. While these are primarily intended for halfmourning wear they are much de-sired by Ladies of quiet taste who are not in mourning.

We shall also offer "short lengths" of Black Cashmeres, Henriettas, Serges, Broadcloths and other desira-ble Black Dress Fabrics at unusually low remnant prices. (First floor, second annex.)
